

My company sells Office Supplies to the Federal Government. I heard that the FCC has filed that after Aug 25th that we can not send out faxes anymore without written statements for our customers. I sell to thousands of people and they rely on my faxes each month for specials etc... We have called and ask permission in the past to send them a monthly fax. How can I get Thousands upon Thousands of buyers to get me a written statement. That takes up there time and mine, plus the paper that would be wasted (I thought government was supposed to not waste) What are small companies that help the government save money supposed to do? This could put thousands of small business's out of business. Plus my faxes are not unsolicited faxes, we have their permission already. So my questions is what are we supposed to do? And if and when this takes effect is the FCC going to advertise for me instead and get my customers info to them?
